

Sechs Trump-Wähler: Warum sie 2024 für ihn votieren

Sechs Trump-Wähler erläutern ihre Unterstützung für ihn in der Präsidentschaftswahl 2024 und die wichtigsten Themen, die sie bewegen.

Chico, Kalifornien, USA - Donald Trump, the political whirlwind of 2016, is back in the spotlight as he embarks on another bid for the presidency in 2024, and he still holds a firm grip on a passionate following. Six of his staunch supporters have revealed their fervent reasons for backing him once again, emphasizing key issues like immigration, the economy, and government dependency. As Trump aims to reclaim the White House, the stakes have never been higher.

Luiz Oliveira, a 65-year-old business owner from Nevada, is outraged by the surge of immigrants crossing the southern border. Having earned his citizenship through hard work, Oliveira insists, "You want to come to America? Earn it, like I did." He believes Trump will restore order and security at the border. Meanwhile, for truck driver Ben Maurer from Pennsylvania, the promise of a booming economy takes center stage. As he prepares for the arrival of his second child, Maurer views Trump as the figure who can revive American jobs and make life more affordable amidst rising inflation. "He has a handle on making it about the American economy first," Maurer declares confidently.

Supporters Share Their Stories

June Carey, 70, recalls her early struggles on welfare and is adamant that it breeds dependency. Living off social security, she hopes Trump can pave the way for self-sufficiency for millions of Americans. "I saw how it does not work," she says. "Trump runs this country like a business, and the more he talks, the more I am impressed." Similarly, Amanda Sue Mathis, a former Navy servicewoman, underlines Trump's strength as a leader. "He invokes fear in the rest of the world," she asserts, suggesting that Trump's unpredictability helps reinforce America's global stance.

Brooke Riske, an educator from Virginia, transformed from a skeptic into a supporter, citing Trump's steady presence during the uncertainty of the pandemic. "He kept our country very peaceful for several years," she claims. Finally, Jeremy Stevens, a small business owner, reflects on Trump's industrial policies that resonate with his belief that "the country is a giant business to be run." With crucial issues like inflation at the forefront, these supporters feel Trump's return could mean a return to what they consider American prosperity. The fervor and conviction of Trump's supporters remain evident as the 2024 campaign unfolds, igniting heated discussions nationwide.
